Tactical Operations Series

INTRODUCTION

Tactical Element, a Division of Aguius-HTS, is a Florida based, veteran-owned, tactical consulting and training organization comprised of tactical law enforcement operators and operator/medics (SWAT); and former military (conventional and non-conventional) operators and operator/medics specializing in tactical medical operations (TMO), delivering the highest standard of Tactical Operations Series training.

Training cadre deliver operational and support training at the highest threat level, by providing knowledge and services relative to the entire spectrum of tactical operations as it applies to the Global War on Terrorism (GWOT).

During training opportunities, Tactical Element utilizes active, real time field training exercises as opposed to conventional lecture or seminar methodology. Participants learn the up-to-date concepts and tactics, and why such methodology is effective. Participants are also afforded ample opportunity to execute skills learned by participating in realistic scenarios conducive of the subject matter topics.

The United States Special Operations Command's (USSOCOM) number one medical priority is eliminating loss of life on the battlefield. Tactical Combat Casualty Care (TCCC) guidelines were developed by USSOCOM to ensure that special operations forces (SOF) units suffering casualties on the battlefield are able to respond with actions that provide the best casualty care consistent with the tactical environment and quality small unit tactics.
